

Bauhaus – Modell und Mythos

(Bauhaus – Model and Myth)

Germany, 1998/2009, 103 min., with subtitles

Filmmaker and Visiting DAAD Professor Dr. Kerstin Stutterheim
Konrad Wolf School of Film and Television, Potsdam, Germany in attendance

Thursday, October 28, 2010

4:00 – 6:00 p.m.

N.B. Due to time restrictions, this screening will begin promptly.

Room 208, North Building
Munk School of Global Affairs
1 Devonshire Place
University of Toronto

The Bauhaus School was probably the most influential art school to emerge in Europe and remains well known around the world as the central nucleus of modern architecture and design. But 'bauhaus' was more than just cubic building or steel tube chairs. The models introduced then are still with us today. The school's faculty included renowned artists Wassily Kandinsky, Lyonel Feininger, Paul Klee Oskar Schlemmer, and the architects Walter Gropius and Mies van der Rohe. This documentary retraces the school beginnings following World War I, its revolutionary impact, and tells the true story of its closing and the political complicity among some members during Nazi-Germany, as recounted by Bauhaus alumni, men and women who once attended the school.

Pre-registration is requested at: <http://webapp.mcis.utoronto.ca/EventDetails.aspx?eventid=9564>